Dear Chris,

Thank you for your evidence to the committee on 23 November as part of our inquiry into digital regulation. We found it a very useful session and are grateful for your time and that of Lizzie Greenhalgh.

The Committee would be grateful for your thoughts on a further question that arose during the course of our deliberations following the session:

If, as part of an increasingly principles-based system, regulators are charged with forming a considered opinion on how best to interpret and represent the public interest, how bold should they be in expressing that opinion publicly?

We look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely,

Lord Gilbert of Panteg
Chair of the House of Lords Select Committee on Communications and Digital
