

Written evidence from Mrs Shirley Dudfield [HAB0310]

I think that if cohabiting partners want to make a commitment worthy of the same rights as a couple who make a lifelong commitment to each other in law, then they should make that same commitment (ie get married)

This will save a lot of time and trouble with new legislation which will not protect children nearly as well as evidence suggests marriage does.

July 2010