

Written evidence from R Murchie [HAB0340]

Marriage is a formal commitment between two people and has been the basis of human society for a very long time. It supports stable families and children of married couples still have better outcomes than from other relationships or from single parents.

The state should therefore preserve the rights of married couples above other forms of cohabitation.

July 2021